CAMPAIGN IDEA

The Account Leak Audit: a tightly framed ABM play for teams with high-intent accounts that keep stalling between first interest and sales commitment.

The campaign does not lead with features. It leads with the account's visible leak: unclear message, weak proof, broken handoff, or internal misalignment around why now.

ACCOUNT ROOM STRUCTURE

- Opening note: the observed account pressure and why it matters now.
- Leak map: one page scoring clarity, proof, friction, and next step.
- Proof strip: relevant examples, benchmark, before-after, or narrative evidence.
- Buying-committee blocks: CFO, operator, champion, skeptic.
- Action path: book audit, share with team, or send current page for teardown.

COPY EXAMPLES

Subject: Your pipeline problem may be hiding on the page before sales ever sees it.

Landing headline: Find the account leak before the opportunity goes quiet.

CTA: Send the page. I will show you where belief breaks.

WHY IT STANDS OUT

The buyer gets a useful artifact before the sales ask. The seller gets a reason to follow up that is not just checking in. The account sees commercial thinking, not surface-level personalization.
