

SOCIAL AND SUBSTACK CONTENT KIT

Posts, hooks, carousel copy, and Substack angles built from the GTM/ABM/Product Marketing positioning.

GTM

ABM

PRODUCT MARKETING

BEBAS NEUE

LINKEDIN POSTS

- The GTM handoff is where good copy goes to die. If the ad, landing page, SDR note, sales deck, and follow-up all say a different version of the value, the buyer has to do the work your messaging should have done.
- ABM is not putting the company name in the first line. ABM is proof placement. It is knowing which claim matters to which person in the buying committee, then giving that person the exact evidence they need to believe the next step is worth it.
- Product marketing is the discipline of making a product easier to choose. Not easier to describe. Easier to choose.

X / THREADS HOOKS

- Most pipeline problems are language problems with a dashboard on top.
- A good message house should make the sales call shorter.
- If a competitor can use your headline, your positioning has not made a decision.
- The best ABM asset is not personalized. It is specific.

INSTAGRAM CAROUSEL

- Slide 1: Your headline is not positioning if a competitor can use it.
- Slide 2: Positioning names the buyer before it describes the company.
- Slide 3: It names the pain in business language.
- Slide 4: It makes one claim and proves it.
- Slide 5: It handles the silent objection.
- Slide 6: It tells the buyer what to do next.
- Slide 7: Fix the sentence before you buy more traffic.

SUBSTACK ANGLES

- The sentence before the funnel: why most demand problems start before the campaign is built.
- Proof placement: the quiet difference between content that gets attention and content that creates trust.
- Founder voice after AI: why generic output made taste more valuable, not less.
- The account room as a sales asset: how ABM gets sharper when it gives the buyer a useful artifact.