COVER LETTER · SALES REPRESENTATIVE, MAJOR ACCOUNTS

OWNERS WANT THEIR TIME BACK. I'LL SELL IT TO THEM.

Dear Evan,

> Long Island owners didn't start a construction firm, a dealership or a factory to run payroll, chase open enrollment and keep up with New York compliance. ADP Comprehensive Services takes that work off their desk, and I'd like to be the one who shows them.

I'm applying for the Sales Representative, Major Accounts role. Today I sell at Mercedes-Benz of Smithtown, where every deal runs the full cycle from prospecting to financing to close, and the job is helping a buyer see why the premium choice is worth it. That's the Comprehensive Services sale: not the cheapest payroll, but the one that gives an owner back their week. I also opened a new channel there by calling service customers before their appointments, the same instinct I'd bring to cross-selling ADP's existing clients.

Before that I spent nearly two decades selling to executives. At Mercer I worked with CHROs and Fortune 50 HR leaders, so I know how the HR buyer thinks. At Ericsson my deal reviews raised enterprise win rates 15% and cut sales cycles 30% on the way to $200M+ in influenced revenue. At DEFY Media I closed multimillion-dollar partnerships with Sony, Warner Bros. and Google.

Here's how I'd work a Major Accounts territory:

- Start where I'm already trusted. Through the Long Island Builders Institute I'm working with builders and subcontractors: 50-to-999-employee companies with multi-site crews, union and prevailing-wage jobs, and constant hiring.
- Hunt with a system. AI-assisted research and multi-channel outreach (32% reply rates), every touch in Salesforce, pipeline reviewed weekly with my manager.
- Sell outcomes, not modules. Open with the owner's hours, risk and turnover, then bring in Comprehensive Pay, Benefits and HR as the fix.

I wrote the full 90-day plan, with target segments, discovery questions and the weekly scorecard I'd hold myself to, at mkparrish.com/adp. I'd welcome 20 minutes to walk you through it.

Thank you,

Mary Kate Parrish
